Workshop development:

1. INTRODUCTION

The fraternal animation is an evangelical and Franciscan accompaniment service that the OFS offers to youngsters (YouFra and NiFra, Franciscan children).

The youth needs to have somewhere to look up to, they need to see people who assume their vocation, their gifts and also their limitations. And the Animator will be the one who, being close to youngsters, will make an effort to awaken in their hearts the desire to embrace and go on during their life the vocation that they have received.

The fraternal animator does not represent himself or herself before the young people, but the Franciscan fraternity to which he or she belongs. It is not an individual mission, but a mission of the fraternity that the Animator will undertake together with the youth.

The animator must be an instrument of communion between the OFS and YouFra at all levels, by participating in and accompanying the daily life of the YouFra fraternity. And, above all, the animator should:

- Be alongside the YouFra Council and the OFS Council, fostering integration between the OFS and YouFra. Ensure appropriate Franciscan formation that helps youngsters to place at center of their life the person and the teachings of Christ, recognizing that the YouFra has an organization and specific formation methods suitable for the youth. Collaborate in the growth of the spirituality of the YouFra Council.
- Implement the creation of new fraternities of YouFra, especially in the fraternities of the OFS where there is no YouFra.
- Attend to gatherings, meetings and chapter of the Franciscan Youth, since the YouFra also has moments similar in nature to those of the OFS for living out the Franciscan charisma and strengthening fraternal bonds.

In this way, young people who feel called to the Franciscan life will discover a treasure in the Franciscan Order.
Therefore, a fraternal animator is someone who:

- Has the mission to bear witness of evangelical life.

- Recognises that their vocation given by God as a layperson is the source that inspires them to animate.

- Accompanies personal and community processes.

- Promotes the Franciscan spirituality and vocation.

- Encourages formation and fraternal life.

- Motivates communion with the OFS, the Church, and other groups.

Ultimately, a fraternal animator is not:

- A group coordinator or leader.

- A traditional catechist.

- Someone who imposes decisions.

2. WORKSHOP EXPLANATION. Group work.

Each of the eight existing groups must choose one representative, who will select an envelope of a different colour. Envelopes will be chosen in reverse order, starting with Group 8 and ending with Group 1.

Inside the envelop there will be:

- A card presenting a situation to work on
- A card with 4 questions to reflect on that situation.

Each group will be located in a different space and when all the members of the group arrive in that space you will have to:

- Read the situation together.
- Reflect and discuss the questions as a group.
- Summarise the key points (main ideas, solutions, tools, etc.) on a sheet of card located in your designated area.

SITUACIONES

◇ ENVELOPE 1 – Animator Burnout

Situation:

You've been serving as a fraternal animator in the same fraternity for several years. You've seen many young people come and go, some stayed committed, others drifted away. Lately, you feel tired, with less enthusiasm and energy. You're wondering if you are doing a good job and if you should step aside. You are not sure how to discern this or who to talk to about it.

Questions for discussion:

1. What are some signs that an animator may need to stop or be accompanied?
2. How to take care of the vocation and motivation of the fraternal animator?
3. What spaces or people can offer listening, discernment, and renewal?
4. How to avoid activism and keep the spiritual dimension of service alive?

🔸 ENVELOPE 2 – Non-existent Group

Situation:

You've been asked to animate a youth group in a parish where there are currently no active young people. There are children's catechism and adult groups, but no youth presence. The community lacks a culture of youth ministry, and you don't even know where to start. You feel alone in this task.

Questions for discussion:

1. What steps would you take to identify and attract potential young people?
2. What partnerships could you seek within or beyond the parish?
3. How could you organise a first meaningful and engaging activity?
4. What personal attitude should a fraternal animator have in this context?

- ENVELOPE 3 – Children's Group

Situation:

You are working with a group of mostly 10 to 14-year-olds. They do not yet clearly understand what YouFra is, and their commitment is limited. The atmosphere is good, but activities often get out of hand. There are no older role models or additional supervisor to accompany beyond you.

Questions for discussion:

1. How would you adapt meetings and language to connect with their age group?
2. How can you nurture a sense of belonging and a Franciscan following?
3. What role do creativity, games and spirituality play in this group?
4. How can you gradually develop internal role models?

- ENVELOPE 4 – Two Groups / Two Charismas

Situation:

In your parish, there are two active youth groups: YouFra and a Catholic Scout group. Each has its own activities, but they don't collaborate or know each other well. There is some rivalry over space, resources, and the parish priest's attention. You are the fraternal animator for YouFra, but you believe bridges should be built.

Questions for discussion:

1. How would you promote dialogue and communion between both groups?
2. What Christian and Franciscan values can be used as a bridge?
3. How can you maintain your own identity without being closed off to others?
4. What joint activities might help heal the relationship?

- ENVELOPE 5 – Dispersed Group / Peripheries

Situation:

You are part of an emerging fraternity in a tourist region, with members living far apart. They are few but eager to do something together. However, distance, irregular work schedules, and lack of infrastructure make in-person meetings difficult. The parish priest is supportive but doesn't fully understand the youth reality. You are the fraternal animator.

Questions for discussion:

1. What specific obstacles do you face in living the fraternity?
2. What strategies could maintain the connection and the sense of group?
3. How can NiFra/YouFra be proposed in a geographically dispersed context?
4. How can motivation and the Franciscan spirit be kept alive from a distance?

◆ ENVELOPE 6 – Conflict with External Agent

Situation:

You are the fraternal animator of a YouFra group that was functioning well until one young person began experiencing tensions with the friar in charge or with another youngster from the fraternity. This has caused discomfort, and the young person no longer wishes to attend meetings if that individual is present. The rest of the group senses the tension but doesn't know how to respond. You also feel uneasy and fear this could harm the group's unity.

Questions for discussion:

1. What steps can an animator take to manage such conflict?
2. How can reconciliation be promoted without forcing or taking sides?
3. What boundaries should a fraternal animator maintain when involved in conflict?
4. What Franciscan tools could help heal this community wound?

◇ ENVELOPE 7 – Lack of Connection Between JuFra and OFS

Situation:

You are a fraternal animator of a well-functioning Youfra group with committed young people and a good atmosphere. Nevertheless, the local OFS fraternity does not get involved: they do not know the group, do not participate in joint activities, and do not show much interest. Some adults see young people as 'children' or as a passing phase. You feel that there is a lack of communion between generations.

Questions for discussion:

1. How can a closer relationship between the local OFS and JuFra be built?
2. What prejudices might be blocking that connection, and how can we overcome them?
3. What specific actions or gestures could foster intergenerational encounters?

4. What role can the fraternal animator play as a bridge between the two fraternities?

- ENVELOPE 8 – Lack of Generational Renewal

Situation:

For years, there has been a very active JuFra group, but most of its members are now close to 30 or have already moved to the OFS. There are no new young people to take over, and the group's activities have become occasional. You are the fraternal animator, and you feel that if nothing changes soon, the group might disappear.

Questions for discussion:

1. How can we identify and accompany new generations of young people in the fraternity?
2. What strategies can support generational transition without losing the spirit of the group?
3. What role can NiFra or other early-stage spaces play as a seedbed for JuFra?
4. How can we encourage older members to become mentors for the new ones?

3. GUIDED ROUND TABLE (Plenary session):

FIRST PART: Welcome and explanation on how the round table will be developed:

Thank you all for your hard work and commitment. Now, we will briefly share what each group has reflected on. We are not looking for perfect solutions, but to listen, learn, and discover together the realities our brothers and sisters face.

The presentation will be done by groups. Some members of the group should hold up the summary card, while the designated representative will briefly indicate:

- What is the situation they had to work on?
- What questions did it have?
- They will begin the presentation that will provide the answers to these questions.

SECOND PART: Moderator's Conclusion

Have you noticed how all the situations call for listening, patience, creativity and teamwork?

Being a fraternal animator is not easy, but with an open heart and the right tools, it is possible to accompany and spread seeds.

The main document where we can find the keys to fraternal animation is called: ‘Guidelines on Fraternal Animation.’

Now, we offer you a summary of tools that will help you live out this service of fraternal animation as professed brothers and sisters animators of YouFra and NiFra:

📖 1. The Rule and Constitutions of the OFS

Source of identity. Remember, you are an animator not out of personal interest, but by vocation and fraternal sending.

🙏 2. Franciscan Spirituality

Simplicity, joy, minority, fraternity, respect for each person’s pace, preference for the little ones. It’s not a pedagogy, it’s a way of life.

🛐 3. Prayer

Being an animator isn’t about doing many things, it’s about letting God speak through you. Let your prayer life sustain your service.

👂 4. Active Listening and Discernment

Real, unhurried listening. Not to respond, but to understand. Observe with empathy and pray before acting.

👫 5. Teamwork

You never animate alone. This service is fraternal and co-responsible. Rely on others, share burdens and decisions.

🧭 6. Constant formation

You don’t know everything. Stay on a path of human, spiritual, affective and pastoral growth. Learn with humility.

🎨 7. Creativity and Adaptation
Every young person is different. There are no patterns. Dare to adapt, to try, to fail, and to learn, without losing your Gospel focus.

💓 8. Witness of Life

More than methods, what transforms most is how you live. Your life is your first proclamation.

May you be brothers and sisters that accompany, that do not drag, that inspire, that do not impose.
